HONGKONG, JANUARY 5TH, 1891.

Tax death of His Imperial Highness Prince Ch'un, father of Emperor Kwana Su, is an event of no little importance to China, . The Prince's decease was not wholly unexpected for he has long been in precarious health. | published on our front page having reference to and his death was actually announced, in August last, by the Peking correspondent Yangteze. of a Shanghai contemporary. His Highness rallied, however, and has lingered on for some months, though he never recovered sufficiently to engage in much active work. Prince Ch'r YEH, or Prince

Ch'un, as he was commonly called, was

Kwang and brother of the Emperor Hran Fonc. He took little or no part in state affairs during the reigns of HIER FUNG and Tung Chin, and even after the acceshe had no active share in the Government until the degradation of Prince Kune in April, 1884, when he was appointed President of the Grand Council. In this it was decided to start the care at the beginning capacity the Prince showed considerable tact of winter. Heavy storms, however, prevailed "and soon proved that he was much less ham. Having been appointed in October, 1885, Director of the newly formed Board of Admiralty, he visited Tienton and Chefoo for the purpose of inspecting the forces. and displayed an intelligent interest in the vesse's of the Peiyang Squadron. In October, 1888, Prince Ch'un also gave up the Palace he bad been occupying, which the present Emperor was born, in order that it might be fitted up for the use of His Majesty on ANCY DRESS BALL his attaining his majority. The Emperor has since built a magnificent residence for his father in the northern part of Peking, now nearing completion, unfortunately never to be tenanted by the person for whom it proverbially kind-hearted and of a generous disposition, and is said to have been a universal favourite. It is to be hoped that his son will display similar qualities. It is to His Majesty's credit that he has, throughout the protracted illness of his father. shown the utmost solicitude for him, both 23 by visiting him and endeavouring to procure medical and other relief for his maladies. The death of Prince Ch'un will be a great loss at Peking, for he was undoubtedly, as he was naturally, the guide and counsellor of the young Emperor. No doubt there have been other influences around the Throne. but that of Prince Cn'un was at once nower ful and judicious. It is to be hoped that

The colebrated Baldwin Brothers gave their parachute performance at Happy Wallay ou Sainrday afternoon. It was pretty confidently expected that the performance would be a thorough success, and even the most sanguine of spectators must have been thoroughly gratified with the success of the performance so far as it was itself concerned. Whether it was pecuniarily a success, that is to say adequately so, is of course another question. A balloon ascent is a performance which, unfortunately for the performer, can be viewed as well outside the enas final. As on previous occasions when the Associaclosure as from within, and this fact was largely taken advantage of on Saturday, a very large crowd of spectators thronging the centre of Happy Valley and also the Bowen Road. In case some of these should be misjudged we may mention the fact that a distinguished member of the community, preferring to watch the performance from the higher levels, took up his position there, but having at the same time the delicacy to forward to the performers the cost of admission. Apropos of this, the following little anecdate may be in the recollection of some of our readers. Some years ago a celebrated singer was giving performances in one of the leading towns in Australia. Adjoining the hall was a large garden or park, and it was speedily discovered that the singer could be heard as well, and the weather being oppressive. rather more comfortably, outside the hall than within. H. K. C. C. v. NON COMMISSIONED OFFICERS OF THE GARRISON. The above match was commenced on Friday at 2 p.m. sharp. Major Hannay, who esptained the Club, won the toss and sent in G. E. Faverner and Drury. After scoring 8 the latter was easily caught. Major Hannay now came in and capital form. The Major's play was much admired, especially his cutting. Taverner has greatly improved since his first appearance, no doubt owing to his constant practice at the nets, an admirable example which we should like to see others follow. At 117 Taverner was caught with 55 runs to his credit. Shortly afterwards Major Hannay was clean bowled by Tennant for 48. Another stand was made b Platt and Travers, who had scored 17 and respectively when the game was closed for the On resuming the following morning the total was raised to 225 before the innings closed, F. L. Taverner scored 10. Had he been quicker between the stumps he would have made double that number and a little "backing up ." on his part would do no harm. Tennant was Murieson played well for his 14, particularly on the leg the widower has to pay her parents a sum of side. Steel also batted in good form. Newton who drove freely, made the highest individual score, 31. The bowling honours were equally divided between Travers, Taverner, and Lammort, each securing 3 wickets. Landale, who Korean Question extracted from the Wan-kuo came in at the end, bowled very successfully, as -less analysis shows - 5 balls, runs nel, I maiden over, and 2 wickets. Travers performed the "hat trick," getting 3 wickets in successive balls. The innings closed for 112, which necessitated a follow on. In the second venture Murieson again played well for his 28. None of the others appeared to understand Landsle's bowling, and the wickets fell rapidly until Grestock and Morrison got together, when the total was tenced to five years' imprisonment for orraised from 62 to 28, at which figure the innings ganizing robberies in the Pwanyn district. He same figure, and a comparatively small proclosed, the match resulting in a win for the Club by an innings and SI runs. Landale's analysis supply the gangs of robbers with information again speaks for itself. 6 wickets for 37. The match was a most enjoyable one throughout, and it is trusted the Club will have an opportunity
